

We use a range of eye trackers, which include an SR-Research Eyelink 1000 desktop and Eyelink II head-mounted.

These are used to conduct studies with a range of clinical populations in order to understand the underlying

Eye tracking is also used to do usability testing by mapping how people pay attention to specific features

